

BODIES OF TWO WOMEN ARE FOUND IN QUARRY POOL

Tragedy Discovered Near Souderton; Think Two Men Also Drowned

TO SEARCH FOR CAR

Authorities Believe Auto and Occupants Plunged In Pool During Night

SOUDERTON, June 9.—(INS)—The bodies of two unidentified women were found floating on the surface of an abandoned quarry pool, one mile south of here today. The bodies of their male companions are still believed to be in the pool.

The women are believed to be occupants of an automobile which plunged into the pool during the night. Broken concrete posts supporting cables around the water hole, and the presence of oil on the surface of the water led to this belief.

The women were fashionably dressed. One was about 40 years of age, with dark hair; and the other about 20-years her senior, with gray hair.

Coroner George Huff, Monroe County, and Chief of Police George Kulp, of Souderton, have ordered the pool to be dragged in an effort to recover the automobile and bodies of the men believed to be in the water.

Discovery of two men's straw hats floating on the water led authorities to believe two men had also been drowned.

The discovery of the bodies was made this morning shortly after ten o'clock by a truck driver who was passing. The two bodies were taken to a Souderton morgue.

COMMUNICATION

To the Public:
There's a story told of a man whose wife went to a bridge party and had to start before her cake which she was baking was finished. She asked her husband to take it out of the oven for her in half an hour. When she returned, the cake, burnt to a crisp, stood on the kitchen table. Before she could say anything her husband spoke up, "Well, I did as you asked me to. I took it out of the oven."

It looks now as if some of our friends who would like Bristol to have playgrounds this season are like this man. Their intentions are good, but they will be a little late. About the middle of July they will send in their checks and then wonder why the playgrounds were not started, but we need the money now.

To properly try out this work we should know by tomorrow, June 10th, just how much money we can count on for this worthy cause. To date only $141 has been received from 18 persons. That of course is far from enough to conduct even one playground for two months. We know there are many other people in Bristol who intend to contribute. Won't you please send your check in to Mrs. Frank Lehman, 316 Radcliffe street, or Miss Jane Rogers, 206 Jefferson avenue? Perhaps some of the parents of children who enjoy the playgrounds would care to send in something. Any amount, no matter how small, will be very welcome.

Please help us, and help us now! PLAYGROUND COMMITTEE OF BRISTOL TRAVEL CLUB.

SHOCK EXPECTED FOR CHANCELORES OF EUROPE WITH BLUNT STATEMENTS OF LIVERIGHT THAT EUROPE IS NOW PREPARING FOR ANOTHER WAR

Two Dominating Forces in European Life, Well-Known Publisher Says, Are Intense Nationalism and Intense Jealousy — Examples Are Cited

By J. C. Oestheicher
I. N. S. Cable Editor

NEW YORK, June 9.—The chancelleries of Europe accustomed to delicately-worded and occasionally vague diplomatic correspondence, are expected to get a decided shock when they read the sensational statements of Horace Liveright, the well-known publisher, who stepped off the gangplank for his ocean liner and bluntly told International News Service that Europe was preparing for another war.

Undoubtedly, Mr. Liveright spoke much more unreservedly than the average American tourist who returns from abroad after studying conditions in the capitals of Europe. He may have exaggerated the importance of certain things he saw. But few unbiased persons who visit Europe these days can fail to notice strong evidences of two great and apparently dominating forces in European life.

One, as Mr. Liveright says, is intense nationalism. The other is intense jealousy.

The most recent example of what international jealousy and mistrust can do in stirring up serious troubles between nations was contained in the speeches of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy during his state tour of the Italian provinces. Extolling the virtues of Fascism, exhorting the youth of Italy to be ready to spring to the sword to aid in the perpetuation of their mother-land's glory, the speeches aroused much feeling. With the near fiasco of the London naval conference, due mainly to French and Italian inability to agree, still fresh in their minds, French editorial writers took occasion to assault Mussolini with their pens, characterizing his utterances as the most war-like speeches made since 1914.

Perhaps with some exaggeration, these writers sketched Mussolini as the most rampant militarist on the European scene, and described Italy as an armed camp, ready at any moment or hour, to rise up in an attempt to further the Fascist creed beyond her natural geographic boundaries.

How much of these French allegations is true is a moot question. It cannot be denied that Mussolini is teaching his youth the glory of the sword and that he is quick to retaliate should anyone challenge the position of Italy as a world-power of the first class. Everyone knows the London naval conference degenerated from a five into a three power affair because Mussolini demanded absolute parity with France while the latter nation was equally insistent in its refusal to consider its Mediterranean

FIREMEN QUICKLY CONQUER STUBBORN FIRE

Early Morning Blaze Routs Radcliffe Street Residents Here Today

LOSS PLACED AT $2,000

Fire early this morning damaged the residence of Dr. Thorne S. Harris, 405 Radcliffe street. The property was considerably damaged in the rear and it is estimated that it will cost about $2,000 to replace the burned portion.

It is owned by George L. Horn. It was about three o'clock when an old shed in the rear of the Harris dwelling was found ablaze. The flames licked their way up the rear of the three-story house and into the partition leading into the dwelling of Dr. John J. Hargrave.

Consolidated firemen were summoned and through very effective work quickly got control of the blaze. A four-man racing shell of the Young Men's Association which was in the yard in the rear of the club house, was blistered. The shell had just been recently refinished.

The firemen had waterlines and chemicals both in action.

The house is situated in a row of dwellings and had not the firemen quickly gotten control of the situation there would have been a conflagration.

Water lines were laid from all points as the flames were making headway.

GO TO CONVENTION

Mrs. Elsie Keplar, of Andalusia, worthy matron of Morning Star Chapter No. 395, Order of Eastern Star, and Mrs. Ethel M. O'Dea, associate matron, left yesterday to attend the 36th annual session of the Order of Eastern Star of Pennsylvania which convenes this week in Allentown. The session opened last evening with divine services in the Zion Reformed Church, Allentown, Pa.

neighbor as a military and navy equal. Mussolini's reply to his French critics was speedy and characteristic. His speeches he confessed, had "set all the geese of Europe cackling." And then he added:

"It is made to appear that Italy is the only nation of Europe that is arming. That is far from the truth. As all the other nations of Europe are arming, Italy must arm too."

In any case, while Europe's statesmen seem sincere in their efforts to abolish war, and participate wholeheartedly in any movements started in this behalf the continent still remains heavily armed fearful of "revenge," of imperialistic aggression, of economic domination and with each nation distrustful of every move its neighbor makes.

ERRORS HELP CROYDON TO LOSE TO ST. ANN'S

Nine Mis-Plays Aid Visitors To Capture Game In League Schedule

FINAL SCORE 10 TO 7

Schedule For Tonight
EMILIE vs. INDEPENDENTS
Result of Yesterday's Game
St. Ann's, 10; Croydon Boys' Club, 7

By T. M. Juno

CROYDON, June 9.—Nine errors by the Croydon Boys' Club was a big help to the St. Ann's nine as it garnered its first victory of the Bristol Twilight League here yesterday by the score of 10-7.

Combined with the nine errors, the "Saints" made eleven hits off one delivery of Miller and his successor, Tranotti. The Bristol boys made a fine job of hitting in the pinches and showed their best batting form of the young season.

Although the home team played poorly afield, it must be said that the winners were not much better when it came to the defensive department of the game. Five errors were committed by the Bristol boys. However, these were shaded by the fact that the infielders made several sparkling plays in the pinches.

The best work done by the Dorrance street boys was displayed by the key-stone laborers, Roe and Pieo. Twice with runners on second and third Roe raced to centerfield to catch short flies which would have fallen safe for hits. Then again with runners on second and third, Pieo dug into the surf to stop grounded balls out of the first baseman's reach which may have been dangerous had he not stopped the balls.

Leo Gleason was the best worker for the losers, that is, on the guarding part of the game. He handled six changes without a fumble. Lake was the leading clubman for the resident team with two out of four. He was fobbed of a hit in the eighth when Missera made a wonderful catch of his liner over third base.

"Lefty" DiTanna with three tallies and two bingles was the best offensive player for the winners.

E. Spadacino was injured in the last frame when he caught a fly ball in right field. The ball split the small finger of his right hand.

The "Saints" scored three runs in the second inning to take the lead.

Roe singled to right field and went to second on a passed ball; Roe scored when Tryon threw to left field to catch the runner going to third; DiTanna was passed; DiTanna stole second; Missera scored DiTanna with a hit over second base; Missera went to second on the throw home; Tosti singled past second base and Missera scored; Spadacino and Whyno struck out while Gilardi hoisted a fly to Piazza.

The tail-enders scored two more in the second. Pieo beat out a roller to Piazza; Pieo went to second on a wild pitch and continued home on Tryon's second error behind the plate; Oriola grounded out to Piazza; Roe lifted a fly to Tritschler; DiTanna singled, stole second and scored when Tryon made two passed balls; (Tranotti went to pitch for Croydon and Lake went to catch) Missera was out on a fly to left.

Croydon's first run was scored in its part of the third. Piazza singled over second; Hamm flied to Missera; Tranotti walked; Tritschler sacrificed; Roe made a nice stop of Bock's roller but threw low to first, Piazza scoring; Gleason fanned.

Three more runs in the fifth brought the St. Ann's total to eight. Gilardi received a pass and stole second; Pieo's short fly went to Gleason; Oriola singled to left, Gilardi counting; Oriola went to second on the throw home; Roe went out on a fly to (Continued on Page 4)

HIGHWAY PATROL DRIVE ON MOTORISTS

Fifty Arrests Are Made Over Week-End to Prevent Accidents

PAY FINES AND COSTS

Members of the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol, of Langhorne, yesterday began a crusade against motor law violations and made 50 arrests during the day. Twenty-six were gathered in for not halting at through-traffic "stop" signs, 14 for reckless driving and 10 for improper passing.

Those nabbed for reckless driving were fined from $10 to $25 each and costs. Fines of $10 and costs were imposed in the case of those arrested for improper passing while those who failed to stop at main road intersections were fined $5 and costs.

The crusade was begun because of the increasing number of automobile accidents in Bucks County.

The cases were heard by Justice of the Peace Joseph Keating at South Langhorne and Justice of the Peace John H. Alvey, at Woodbourne. The highway patrolmen who made the arrests were in charge of Trooper McAfee, of the South Langhorne Station.

Publisher's Residence Destroyed by Blaze

DOYLESTOWN, June 9.—Invaluable antique furniture was destroyed Saturday night when the frame summer bungalow of Robert McLean, vice-president of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, at Point Pleasant, nine miles from here, was burned to the ground.

The damage, including the loss of the antiques, was estimated at $10,000. A defective wood stove in the kitchen of the structure was believed to have caused the blaze, while McLean, his wife, their two sons and chauffeur were having dinner at a nearby inn.

The flames had gained considerable headway before they were discovered by Mrs. Albert Rich, who was placing flowers on a grave in a cemetery adjoining the McLean bungalow.

She notified the Point Pleasant Volunteer Fire Department and also the McLean family, whom she had seen enter the inn. Neighbors and weekend campers rushed to aid in fighting the fire.

A line was laid for a distance of 2,600 feet to the Delaware River. The mansion of William McLean, president of the Bulletin, about 200 feet away, was saved by work of the firemen.

The campers formed a bucket brigade, passing water from the river. Despite their efforts, by the time the McLeans could return to the scene only a mass of glowing and smoking embers was left of their home.

At its height, the flames could be seen for a distance of ten miles down the river. The building was situated on a hill off the main road. Nothing was saved. Even the clothing which the McLeans had brought with them in the afternoon was destroyed.

Near-Shooting Affair Staged Early Last Night

A near-shooting affair was staged at Pond and Lafayette streets, early last night, when two men became involved in an argument and one is said to have "pulled" a gun on the other.

The men engaged in fist combat and when the gun was drawn others rushed in. No arrests have been made and no charges preferred.

According to the police, Nick Furlono, Dorrance street, and Jimmie DeCaro, 1012 Chestnut street, were the principals involved. The two were arguing and each is said to have struck the other. Then it is alleged that Furlono pulled a gun from beneath his coat and about this time he was thrown to the ground.

Furlono sustained a cut on the back of the head and an injury to the jaw.

Dominick Petina, Jr., brother-in-law of DeCaro, went to DeCaro's aid and was bitten on the arm, he says, by Furlono. Petina says that had it not been for him DeCaro would have been shot.

A crowd of several hundred was attracted to the scene and police were called.

Apparently there is bad feeling between the two men as this is the third fight that they have had.

The gun was a .32 calibre Spanish pistol. It would have been difficult to have fired it.

ATTRACTIVE WEDDING IN ST. ANN'S CHURCH

Miss Margaret Di Nunzio Becomes Bride of Daniel F. Greco

MANY ATTEND WEDDING

A very pretty church wedding occurred yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, when Miss Margaret J. DiNunzio, daughter of Mrs. Clementina DiNunzio, 836 Beaver street, became the bride of Daniel F. Greco, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Greco, of 207 Franklin street. The wedding took place in St. Ann's Church, and the ceremony was performed by Father Marcellino Romano, O. S. S. T., assistant rector of the church. Miss Frances Tamburella, of Dorrance street, played the wedding march and during the ceremony, Mrs. Thomas Campbell, Locust street, sang, "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride wore a sleeveless gown of white tulle, made long and edged with an overskirt of tulle. The girdle was made of tulle, caught with a rhinestone buckle and her slippers were white satin trimmed with fancy buckles. She wore a lace veil, made cap effect with sprays of orange blossoms at each side of the head, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Anna DiNunzio, sister of the bride, was attired in a pretty sleeveless gown of green tulle, made long and edged with green tulle. A large bow of the material hung gracefully on the left side and she wore white slippers and stockings and a maline Greta Garbo hat with a bow of maline tied under her chin. Her flowers were red roses tied with a green ribbon.

Miss Anna Greco, sister of the groom was bridesmaid and she wore a gown of blue tulle, made exactly like the gown worn by the maid of honor. She also wore a Greta Garbo hat to match her dress, white slippers and stockings and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The little ring bearer was Thomas DeLuca, nephew of the groom. He was attired in a white satin suit, wore white kid slippers and carried a pillow trimmed with lilies of the valley, bearing the wedding ring. The best man was Frederick Valente, of Philadelphia, a cousin of the groom.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, to which a few guests were invited. Late last evening, the happy couple departed for a honeymoon when they will spend two weeks sightseeing at Niagara Falls and various points in Canada. The bride wore as her travelling costume, a blue dress, grey coat, hat, slippers and stockings to match, and a red fox neckpiece, which was a gift to the bride from the groom. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Greco will reside with Mr. Greco's parents on Franklin street.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Greco are Bristolians. At the present time, Mr. Greco is employed at the Keystone Aircraft Corporation. They received many beautiful and useful gifts. Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Philadelphia, Holmesburg, Langhorne and Trenton.

COUNTY MEETS WERE SUCCESSSES, REPORT SHOWS OFFICIALS

Track and Field Meets Held Here Turned Over Profit

EXCEEDED ALL OTHERS

Everyone Much Elated Over Results Achieved by The Committee in Charge

A number of pleasant surprises were sprung at the special meeting of the Athletic Committee of the Bucks County Interscholastic Association when it met at Morrisville.

First the financial success of the B. C. I. meets were well assured. Treasurer William Thomas announced a balance of about $50 and subsequently the receipts were swelled by a $23 check from Quakertown and a $10 check from Newtown. The receipts this year will have exceeded the expenditures by over $80. This is all the more important in view of the fact that in the previous meet the expenditures exceeded the receipts by over $106. Only a balance on hand from the 1928 meet prevented the 1929 meet from going into red over $100.

The second surprise was when Principal Warren Snyder announced that Bristol had turned over to the B. C. I. M. $288 as the part belonging to the association. This was more than three times the amount any other school had ever contributed to the B. C. I. M. in any one year, and will likely stand as a record for many years.

Everyone was delightfully pleased to hear Superintendent Howard James present Bristol's invitation to hold the athletic meet at Bristol again next year. The scholastic accommodations at Quakertown and the athletic accommodations at Bristol have never been equalled in the county. It will be quite some time before any school will be able to offer the facilities for a track meet that will surpass Bristol. Here the classrooms, cafeteria, gymnasium, showers, and track and field, being inclosed, were available.

It was also disclosed that the cost of the judges had been reduced to one half and that the officials under Coach Dean of State Teachers' College of Trenton had conducted the meet in a desirable fashion.

The cost of the awards which were the most attractive ever given was over $100 more than those previously purchased.

The officials were anxious to find improvements in the raising of revenue inasmuch as the present method exacted too much work on the part of the school officials entertaining the meets.

It was suggested that the half-mile run and the 440-yard dash be dropped in favor of other events.

Charles Boehm, president of the B. C. I. M., selected M. R. Reiter, of Morrisville, W. Thomas of Langhorne, W. Smith of Yardley, G. Zarr of Bristol Township, W. Snyder of Bristol, Mr. Klinger of Southampton and Mr. Weisel of Lower Makefield as a committee to submit rules, regulations and a constitution for consideration of the schools next fall.

TOLL BRIDGES

Toll roads, about which an early and important chapter in our history of transportation was written, are a vanishing institution, few if any being destined to survive the present year, unless the needs of present-day motor traffic inspire the construction of new privately-owned through highways for high-speed traffic as is proposed in a number of states.

Toll bridges afford a different picture. They are fewer in number than a half century ago, but during the last decade construction of new ones has about kept pace with the freeing of the old. The situation is analogous to that of the grade crossing, of which new ones are created as rapidly as the old are eliminated.

There are now approximately 230 toll bridges in the United States, but another 30 are under construction, 78 are projected and the number that have reached the congressional authorization stage always hangs around 125.

Privately owned toll bridges are incongruous with free improved highways, free schools and free parks. They are indispensable during the early period of territorial development, but an obstruction to development in settled country not tax impoverished.

Pay by toll, however, is the ideal policy of a democratic people for public acquisition of toll bridges and roads. Under such a policy the user pays for it, and, finishing his partial payments, presents it as a gift to the whole people.

"BOSSY" MAY OVERDO IT

While lost in admiration of the productiveness of those distinguished representatives of bovine breeds which produce more rich milk and butter fat than a small herd of scrub cattle, the urban on-looker wonders whether she is not overdoing it.

What will become of plain, ordinary cows if a comparatively few of the blue-ribbon type flood the milk and butter market?

But do not these aristocrats of the dairy present another farm problem? Too much of everything is being produced by the dairyman as well as by the agriculturist. Having been urged for many years to improve stock and methods of production, the dairyman answers with a cow marvel. In recent months the farmer has been warned that unless he consumed more milk and butter at home and stopped eating substitutes, prices would slump still lower. What will happen if he refuses to do so and yet devotes his time and money to raising record-breaking milk producers?

Pure blooded dairy herds pouring rich pure milk and butter into the markets from many states are one of the farmer's answers to the charge that his methods are obsolete and outworn and that he must find relief for his present financial ills in improved methods. Another answer is the vast surplus of farm products agriculture produces each year.

Popular tunes got on the radio, on the phonograph, in the talkies and on the nerves.

A farmer has perfected a new kind of wheat that looks like barley and tastes like oats. Breakfast food.

U. S. Congressmen Known by Poetry They Recite

Lawmakers of Both Houses Often Resort to Rhyme Throughout the Session.

Those intimate with life at the Capitol know that poetry is much employed for filibuster in the Senate and in the House during "general debate." On first impression these uses do not seem pertinent to the making of laws. During the first month of the short session, when for the most part the supply bills were originating in the House, Senators used twelve stanzas of metered rhyme on eight different occasions to one stanza in the House.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—Lyric outbursts or original poetry have long enlivened the dull debates often staged on the floors of both houses of Congress.

Apparently whenever a Senator or a Representative is lost for a word he turns to the muse to push his point over. Apparently no subject is too grave or commonplace to tempt the

"What care they for wrongs and crimes? It is dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes."

During a filibuster in the Sixty-ninth Congress, while attacking Republicans, he dropped prose for this airy flight of poetry:

"Committee, spare that campaign hoolie tree,
Touch not a single bow;
In election times it shelters me,
You must not harm it now."

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, is another who frequently tries to move his listeners on the floor and in the gallery with his own poetry. Some of his best lines follow:

Seek for the patronage of some great man,
And like a creeping vine on a tall tree
Crawl upward where I cannot stand alone?"

Make my knees callous, and cultivate a supple spine,
Scratch the back of any swine
That roots up gold for me?"

GOLDEN DAWN

by MARC O'FARRELL

This story is based on Warner Bros. Vitaphone production of the play by Otto Harbach and Oscar Hammerstein II.

SYNOPSIS

Only the arrival of Shep Keyes, feared whip man of the East African settlement, has prevented the rites that would have made Dawn the mystic bride of the god Malungu. As such she would be henceforth supplicated in time of war and famine. Dawn is a young girl who only knows that her father was English. She believes, as does everybody else, that she is the product of miscegenation. The prospect of being dedicated to the monster wooden idol, and removed from all contact with people, horrifies her. Shep Keyes intimidates the priest and Dawn's self-styled mother, Mooda. He has his own designs on Dawn. Young Tom Allen, her sweetheart, is brought in a prisoner of war. The Germans have seized the British protectorate.

INSTALLMENT FIVE

Meantime, Tom, who was not in the slightest interested in what Shep and Mooda had to say to each other, had no trouble overhearing them. It was when he heard Dawn's name mentioned that he really began to eavesdrop.

"What you know about Dawn is the reason you can't have her," Mooda told Shep.

"What I know about Dawn is the reason why I want her."

"Hush, Shep!" admonished Mooda. "Please."

Shep lowered his voice, but Tom Allen already had overheard enough to trouble him. He was aware that Shep had long coveted Dawn and had annoyed her with his clumsy attentions; but his consultation with Mooda convinced him that the jungle whip man was contemplating early action toward the fulfillment of his desire. A prisoner of war, he felt helpless to do anything about it, but he resolved nevertheless to watch Shep closely.

In whispers Mooda continued her efforts to persuade Shep not to interfere with the marriage of Dawn to Malungu. "Everybody think Dawn is native girl," she pleaded. "Suppose you say she white. Nobody believe you."

Ego led Shep to lift his voice within range of Tom's ear. "Nobody believe me, huh? One of these English prisoner men already been askin' about her."

"Who?" asked Mooda in quick concern.

"Tom Allen. Ain't he owned a rubber plantation down here long enough? Don't he know white from black?"

"Don't tell him nothin' Shep," begged Mooda.

"I ain't tellin' nobody nothin'—yet."

He indicated that he had nothing further to say, and Mooda, with a quick glance at Tom, hurried into the canteen. Shep also noticed Tom again and was annoyed at his presence. He rose and strutted through the crowd, threatening and bullying.

"Come on," he barked to the Asiatic guards, "get these prisoners out o' here. Dey gets in my way."

Tom, in view of what he had heard, decided not to be hurried off with the rest of the prisoners. He realized that Shep might attempt to enforce his order with the whip but since circumstances were likely to lead to an encounter with the black man eventually, it might as well take place as quickly as possible. He accordingly refused to move.

Without appearing to be aware of Tom's existence, Shep was speculating him closely. He sensed rebellion in the action of the young Englishman and debated several measures of discipline. Finally he walked over and stood before Tom, fixing him with a baleful eye. Tom returned an impersonal stare, as if waiting for Shep to speak. But the whip man, contenting himself with a sneer, turned and busied himself with less intractable prisoners.

Alone, Tom allowed himself thoughts which he had often dismissed with a stab of guilt. He began to examine himself with a view to finding out the precise depth of his affection for Dawn. Like other white men of the settlement he at first found Dawn refreshing. As he grew to know her his affection became personalized—for Dawn the girl, not just for naive native creature of the canteen. In moments of loneliness, he fancied himself somewhat in love with her, but quickly rid himself of the thought. There was that in an Englishman's social code which forbade him to fall in love with a native girl.

But of one truth he was unable to rid himself. He knew that he was happiest when he was with Dawn. To be sure, he masked his true feelings with a sort of big-brother kindness, meantime assuring himself that loneliness for his own people had left him susceptible to the girl's undeniable charm.

Now, cheered by the wisp of evidence he had stolen from the conversation between Mooda and Shep, he no longer wished to argue with himself the propriety of falling in love. He loved Dawn. He could tell himself that, and he could believe it. Still it was a love frustrated. Everything conspired to leave him in a far worse position than ever.

To begin with, he was a prisoner of war, his every move restricted. It would be thus impossible for him to undertake the task which would prove to the world the truth of Dawn's Caucasian birth. He would take Dawn as she was, and let the world think what it liked, but he sadly recognized that the conventions of civilization could not be overcome that way. But he put all discouraging truths aside, mindful that immediate action was vital.

As he studied his task he saw Dawn threatened by twin evils. She was already pledged to the wooden bridegroom that the natives worshipped. To save her from sacrificing herself to savage superstition was in itself a task sufficient to confound him utterly. In addition he must save her from Shep, from whom she would suffer tortures far greater than she would be made to endure as a goddess of the barbarians.

He gave vent to an embittered laugh. It was ironical. He had, in blind adherence to social custom, refused to believe himself in love. And now, helpless, he was faced with the difficulty of securing the freedom of both himself and Dawn, an insoluble problem to start with. A fine time to fall in love!

Sudden excitement among the prisoners roused Tom from his perplexities. Joining them, as they lined up before Captain Eric, he learned that ten of them were to be transported to Tabora, thence to a seaport and home. He experienced a sudden fear. Captain Eric, he knew, was fond of him, and doubtless would include him among the ten. He had frequently expressed to Eric the wish to return to fight for England. But now he had no wish to leave Africa. There was too much to do. He could not depart and leave Dawn exposed to the lust of Shep and the agonies of voodooism.

"Achtung!" At Captain Eric's command, the lines of prisoners came to attention. With sinking heart, Tom steadied himself to hear the message that was to return the favored ten to England.

Captain Eric smiled at the eager prisoners, lined up to hear his momentous announcement.

"I want you to listen to a general order from German headquarters at Tabora," he began. There was an excited murmuring among the prisoners, but they immediately came to attention when the German officer paused.

"You are," he resumed, reading from the despatch, "instructed to release ten of your British prisoners and send them at once to Tabora to be exchanged and sent home."

There was another buzz of conversation, which Captain Eric checked with a sharp "Achtung!" He explained, with maddening deliberateness of speech:

"This means that ten of your number will be sent—home!"

All discipline vanished. Cries of "who are they?" and "Am I going?" and similar questions, heart-breaking in their eagerness, assailed the commander's ears. He raised a hand for order, but it brought only a confused cheering. When, finally, it was again possible to be heard, Anzac pressed forward.

"Wot you say, Captain," he said, "do I go back to Melbourne?"

"An' me, Captain," interrupted Pigeon. "I've always been on the good behavior list."

Another advanced an impassioned plea for his dependent family of ten, longing for him in Kent. Another suddenly recalled that his place was with his wife in York.

"I've got two wives, Captain," the Cockney broke in. "An' a baby wot's cravin' for his Pigeon."

Delivered of this speech, Pigeon found himself with his face in the dirt, thrust thither by an infuriated Englishman known as Duke Duke. It seemed, had found by quick computation that release would permit him to reach England in time to join in the grouse-shooting in Sussex.

A big five was chalked up for the Croydon club in the sixth. Gleason started the fireworks with a double to left field; Lake was hit with a pitched ball; Tryon singled to left, scoring Gleason; Crossley rolled to Whyno; Piazza was safe on Tosti's error; E. Hamm hit to Whyno who tried to get Lake at the plate but the runner ran back to third in safety; Tranotti was passed, forcing in Lake with a run; Tritschler doubled over Spadacino's head, scoring Piazza and E. Hamm but Lake was out when he tried to score; Spadacino to Oriola to Roe to Oriola; Bock struck out.

Two errors by Piazza on rollers of DiTanna and Tosti scored another St. Ann's run in the seventh. Then again in the eighth after Gilardi had doubled, Piazza erred on Pieo's grounder and Gilardi scored the tenth St. Ann's run of the game.

Croydon's final marker was chalked up in the eighth. Crossley singled, Piazza walked and E. Hamm was hit with a pitched ball; Tranotti forced Crossley at the plate, Whyno unassisted; Tritschler struck out; Bock received a pass, scoring Piazza; Gleason's short centerfield fly was caught by Roe.

St. Ann's have released Nick DiBlassio and signed Anthony Castor.

BIG DIAMOND CONTEST TO BE PLAYED HERE

Plenty of excitement and fun is in store for those baseball fans who attend the game between the married and single men of the Consolidated Fire Department tonight on Leedom's Field.

As reported by Manager John Sackville, the married men will give the single men such a terrible lacing that there will be silence about the fire house for the next few weeks.

On the other hand William Bennett, of the single men's team, claims that the married men will not have a show against his band of smoke-eaters.

Well, here goes the line-up for both squads:
Married men: M. Castor, C. Moore, L. Jones, M. Veland, S. Hagerman, A. Arcosese, J. Buck, L. Joyce, D. Ferry.
Single men: R. Betz, N. Schell, E. Bennett, J. Smith, W. Bennett, A. Stowe, E. Fields, H. McGinley, W. Dougherty.

Game begins at 6.45 and will finish when darkness intervenes.

CHARLES E. HUGHES, SR. & CHARLES, JR. HERBERT, JR. & PRESIDENT HOOVER.

Contrary to general beliefs that dispel the age-old adage. Like children of "Fighting Bob," still carry on the heritage of the late statesman; both are active in the political life of the nation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 9.—The sons of our most distinguished political families seem to be following in the footsteps of their illustrious fathers.

Herbert Hoover, Jr., son of the President, is apparently ambitious to duplicate his dad's brilliant career as executive engineer. Young Hoover was recently elected president of the newly organized Aeronautical Radio, Inc. This company was formed to take over activities of the various aviation companies.

Many of the nation's leading trunk air line and private flying services are associated in the company which begins active operation this month. Young Hoover recently pointed out that installation of radio phones in all planes will insure an added degree of safety and will enable the air service to run with the regularity of a railway system.

Charles P. Taft, Jr., son of the late ex-President and Chief Justice, is another great man's son who appears to be a "chip of the old block."

Both as practicing attorney in Cincinnati and prosecutor of Hamilton, Ohio, the brilliant legal work of young Taft won him wide attention and respect in legal circles. When his father retired from the Supreme Court shortly before his death, young Taft was prominently mentioned to succeed Charles E. Hughes, Jr., as Solicitor General of the United States.

Young Hughes is still another celebrity's son whose career so far promises to rival that of his famous father. Both as a New York lawyer and as Solicitor General, the youthful son of the present Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court has stamped himself as one of the leading members of the American Bar. Charles E. Jr., resigned as Solicitor General recently when his father was appointed Chief Justice, succeeding Taft.

Political observers predict that young Hughes is a powerful possibility to capture the Republican nomination for Governor of New York in the next gubernatorial primary. In the event of his winning both nomination and election, Hughes will have a royal opportunity of following his father. It was as Governor of the Empire State over twenty years ago that the Chief Justice first became a prominent national figure.

But most convincing of all these illustrators of the "like father like son" theory are the sons of the late "Fighting Bob" La Follette, of Wisconsin. When the Wisconsin Senator died, his son, Bob, Jr., promptly stepped into his shoes.

Time and time again, during the years since then, the younger man has demonstrated that he inherited his father's great ability as well as the fighting political courage that gave old Bob his nickname.

Now Philip, brother of Bob, Jr., is also following out the great La Follette tradition by announcing he will run in opposition to the renomination of Governor Walter J. Kohler in the coming Wisconsin primaries.

Morrisville Captures Debate at Newtown

MORRISVILLE, June 9.—Morrisville High School defeated Newtown High School in debating at Newtown Friday, 2 to 1. Morrisville defended the negative side of the question: "Resolved: That the chain store system is detrimental to the welfare of the nation."

Morrisville was awarded form and delivery, while Newtown won argumentation, by a 2-1 vote of the judges. The judges were: Professor MacAllister and W. A. Murphy, of Rider College, and George F. Zarr, of Bristol. Newtown was represented by Muriel Buckingham, Carol Shuster and Edmund Price, who spoke in that order. The team carried no alternate. Morrisville was represented by Captain Charles Lucas, Charles Steiner, and Kenneth Yost, speaking in that respective order. Marion Simons acted as alternate.

Seven minutes were allowed for each constructive speaker, while three minutes was the limit for the first two rebuttal speeches and five minutes for the final rebuttal speaker.

By this victory, Morrisville retains its undefeated record for this season and is the championship team in the division of the Ursinus Debating League in Bucks county, which is composed of New Hope, Bensalem, Newtown, Bristol and Langhorne, as well as Morrisville. It is not definitely known whether a plaque will be presented to the winners as a token of superiority in their division by the Ursinus College, which fosters the league.

Shock Expected for The Chancellories of Europe

circumstances are and always have been typical of Europe, that countries hemmed in by alien nations, on all sides, as are the countries of Central Europe, must be prepared in a military sense against possible aggression.

Also, they will say that international wars in Europe are not unlike the ancient feuds of certain American communities, passing on from generation to generation, with a desire for revenge spurring a defeated nation to hopes of new victories. France is outspoken today in fearing Germany will try to erase the defeat of 1918 with a new war, and for that reason presses for rigorous enforcement of the disarmament regulations of the Treaty of Versailles. For that reason too, France raises international complications over such incidents as Germany's construction of the "Ersatz Preussen," a vessel combining battle-ship potentialities in the 10,000-ton limit allotted her.

When the Kellogg Pact for the Outlawy of War was signed, optimists believed that the old saying "Europe can never do without wars" had at last been boded. Since that day, Nationalism—the newer word for that old-time Chauvinism which has been the battle-flag of many past wars—has swept European countries with growing force. All are ambitious, some are imperialistic. Others, even in this day of peace, are militaristic. Statesmen of Peace agree that Europe may find it possible to survive without wars. But to avoid them, she must first abolish hatred and jealousy—the two evil geni of international relations which have ever reared in the baleful shadow of the Four Horsemen.

A Pleasing Bungalow in the Spanish Style

House No. 641

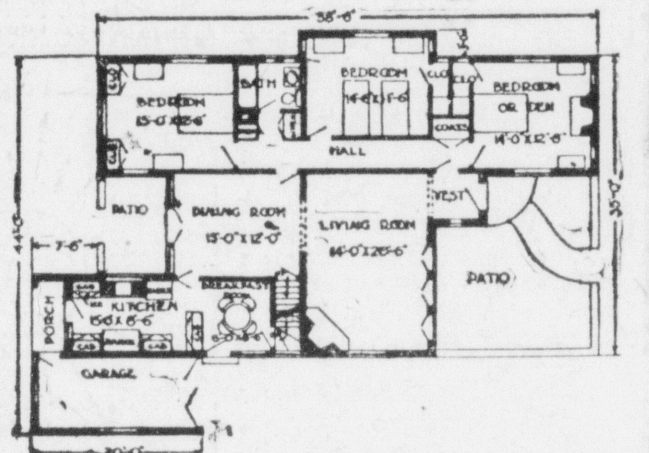

A MODERN version of the old Spanish style, this bungalow with its patios, informal sweeping roof lines and attached garage, presents a rambling appearance that is indeed inviting.

The designer, while preserving the informal feeling in the architecture, has not overlooked beauty, permanence and upkeep, for he has chosen face brick for the walls, tile for the roof, steel frames for the casement windows, and either terra cotta or stone for the twisted columns around the living room windows. The combination has given him his choice of the beautiful ranges of color available in face brick while at the same time taking advantage of the fire-safety and low upkeep costs that accompany such construction. This home is one that will present the same attractive appearance years hence, and should it ever need to be sold it will command the highest resale values.

One enters this home through the low-walled patio shown in the perspective. On the inside, a vestibule opens into the living room and also connects with the hall leading to the three bedrooms on the right. A feature of these bedrooms is that all have windows on three sides. Not only does this provide exceptionally good ventilation, but the rooms have more light than is usual. The bath is conveniently located between the two rear bedrooms.

The living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and garage are compactly designed to occupy the left half of the house. With a fireplace in the corner, triple windows on the front and one on the side, the 14 foot by 20 foot 6 inch living room is a cheery place. An arched opening leads from it into the dining room directly behind it. Through casement windows, the dining room looks out over a charming patio that has been placed in the rear. A swinging door connects the dining room with the breakfast room on the left and this room is fitted with a china cabinet that is built-in. Directly behind the breakfast room is the kitchen with more cabinets—a room plenty large enough to be called a real kitchen. Entrance to the garage is through a doorway directly off the rear porch or through a doorway leading outside from the breakfast room. All in all, this home has been designed for comfort, obtained at minimum expense through permanent construction. The ceiling height of all rooms is 8 feet 6 inches and the content of the house is 33,000 cubic feet. A 55-foot lot will accommodate this home with the attached garage, while 45 feet will suffice without it.

If you are interested in working drawings for House No. 641, the editor of this paper will gladly tell you where they may be obtained.
